The Gifts of Christmas

to the The Gift Virgin Mary

By JOHN J. STEWART

Secund of a Series

Great, so called, was puppet king.

It was a quiet summer evening in the village of Nazareth, in the hill country of Galilee. Mary, a teen-age girl of exquisite beauty and deep spirituality, had retired to her room. Her mind was filled with pleasant thoughts of her recent betrothal and coming marriage to her cousin, Joseph the carpenter, who as he self was of the royal line of David. Joseph, she mused, might even be a king and she a queen, had not the political rights of the royal family long since been lost. But now the Jews were under the domination of Rome, and the cruel and crafty Arab, Herod the

* * Mary had heard her father and others of the elders apeak often, sometimes bitterly, of Israel's unfortunate political condition. And she had oft heard a recital of the carefully kept family genealogy through which they traced their ancestry directly to David. But this was of much less concern to Mary than the fact that she was to be wed to a good man, a man of virtue. In nobility of character, Mary was indeed a princess in the

As she sat in meditation, Mary was startled by the sudden appearance of an angel in the midst of a brilliance of light that filled her room.

"Hail, thou who art highly favored," said the angel. "The Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women. The astonished young woman trembled with fright. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favor with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive and bring forth a Son, and shall call His name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest

"How shall this be," asked Mary, "seeing I know not

Massey: Held Out

Massey Wouldn't Sign Kill-Coffin Order

OTTAWA (CP) - A reliable source says there were indications at the time that in 1956 Governor-General Vincent Massey held out for one or two days against signing Wilbert Coffin's execution order.

The source, formerly condepartment, says former Liberal prime minister St. Laurent had to use all his powers eloquence and experience at law to persuade Mr. Massey to sign

Mr. Massey's reported doubts about affixing his signature could have raised a grave constitutional crisis. A governorgeneral must accept the recommendation of the government in such cases and though his signature is only a formality it is nonetheless a constitutional necessity.

It was known at the time that the St. Laurent cabinet had made a decision on Coffin's application for mercy but that the announcement had to be withGovernor-General's signature The announcement that the mute the death sentence to life imprisonment was made Feb. 1956, and Coffin was hanged early the next morning in Montreal's Bordeaux Jail.

Coffin was convicted of murdering an American hunter in the Gaspe Peninsula.

Coffin's execution was postponed seven times after his conviction in July, 1954. Coffin escaped Sept. 8, 1955, from a Quebec City jail and gave himself up a few hours later.

The cabinet made an unprecedented reference of the case to the Supreme Court of Canada. In a 5-to-2 opinion, the court said it would have upheld he conviction if it had granted Coffin leave to appeal.

In the Commons Thursday, Justice Minister Chevrier, who was not a cabinet minister at the time of the 1956 cabinet de cision, said any royal commission into the Coffin case should be provincial.

He was replying to Reid Scott (NDP-Toronto Danforth) who proposed a royal commission to clear away all the rumors and clouds which are surrounding most mysterious murder trial in Canadian history."

Though rejecting a federal royal commission, Mr. Chevrier said he and his law officers are reading Jacques Hebert's new hook on the case "to ascertain whether there is any federal as-

Security Checks

TT IS A SAD commentary on the current state of the world that civil servants have to be vetted lest they be suspect as security risks, at least to the degree that is now rampant in government offices. Time was when the general assumption was that persons in government employ were individuals whose loyalty and patriotism could be taken for granted.

The astonishing growth of postwar defectors and espionage in various countries has unfortunately changed the picture, so that security now occupies a dominant place in the hierarchy of all governments.

As we have seen, however, the blanket authority of security officials, working in secret and without giving reasons for their suspicions, can cause smearing and unfair treatment of some individuals.

Prime Minister Pearson, in answering questions on this subject in the Commons, conceded by inference that the federal government-admittedly like other governments forced to the practice-employed a great many security officers of one kind or another. On the grounds of "public interest," a common artifice when governments shy away from questions and often needlessly invoked, he declined to detail the range of the security measures in the federal service. He couldn't estimate how many jobs required a security clearance, but admitted that every department had its security officers.

This suggests that practically every employee is eyed with a view to his potential danger to the state, not at all a complimentary situation but in a world of international betrayar and disaffection one seemingly to be accepted whether we like it or not.

The prime minister obviously couldn't reveal the names of the security officers concerned, as he was asked to do, but he could have told how many dismissals on security grounds take place, if only to confirm that by and large the federal civil service is composed of persons whose integrity is beyond

It is the basis on which these security officials function and the extent and nature of their enquiries that give rise to some disquiet, in order that unjust accusations and irrelevant family relationships may not prejudice the future of individuals.

Mr. Pearson identified these departmental security officers only as officials of fairly senior rank and "of integrity and good judgment." One hopes this is so, although two recent cases involving RCN personnel in this area do nothing to invite complete confidence in current security measures. One was a sheer mistake of identity that was inexcusable and the other a judgment based on a family connection of long ago; in both instances clouding good names and causing distress and hardship.

Civil servants deserve at least the credo of the law courts, that a person is deemed innocent unless he himself is proved to be otherwise. And a person dismissed for security grounds should never be folhed off with the "public interest" being cited as cover for refusal to give the detailed reason, thus denying him his right to a fair hearing and the chance to rebut the charge brought against him.

Once He Was Ours

TICTORIA will have a special interest in the outcome of the suggestion of Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker that the government buy the Kingston John A. Macdonald as national me morial. This by reason of the fact that though he was far away-though he did not even see the city until some years later-Sir John was once Victoria's own, and as prime minister represented this constituency for four years with Amor de Cosmos as second member.

It matters not that the great architect of Confederation and first prime minister became member of Parliament for Victoria only because of his personal defeat in Kingston in 1878; this circumstance gave the British Columbia capital the honor of having the first nead of national government from west of the Great Lakes and the only one, ever since, from this province. Victoria hence cannot hold anything against Kingston, which by negative action allowed It such distinction, nor have any less reason to wish to see Sir John's Kingston home made a public place of commemoration.

Neither is there reason why Earnscliffe in Ottawa, the statesman's residence in his later years, where a plaque already honors his memory, should have exclusive precedence over the Kingston home. which would seem to have greater historical signifscance and thus to invite prompt government action on Mr. Diefenbaker's suggestion. The proposal has been referred to the ministers of public works and northern affairs; it is to be hoped their consideration will be quick and favorable.

Violent Pacifism

TESPITE doubts about the effectiveness of their program, one may well applaud the aim of members of a West German pacifist movement who are campaigning against warlike toys in a novel way. They are striking bargains with children, trading playthings of peaceful aspect for the means of mini-

If this were the total of their activities, they might hope for some margin of gain in their drive against militaristic ideas among the young. Even so, the prospect of success could not be counted as bright. As long as youngsters watch television, see films, read, or even hear stories on the parental knee. they patently are going to play the aggressive warrior. whether soldier, speceman, cowboy or Indian, knight of old or intercontinental ballistic missile launcher. And if elaborate toys are not available, a bent stick will still do for a gun in childish imagination, a cardboard box for a tank, a boulder for a fortress. The easy magic of the junior world is infinite.

But whatever good may come from the West German pacifists' efforts surely will be undone by the sequel to trading the toys of peace for those of war, which consists of publicly hammering to bits the imitation arms that offend them.

This cannot be equated with book-burning. It must impress young witnesses however that smashing things is jolly good fun. Many of them will have had this idea on their own, as a form of almost-original ein. But here, in violence and destruction in the name of peace, is grown-up sanction and example.

> Or so I gather, although sad it is to me they're playing pool rather than billiards, per se English billiards, that is, with pockets to the table.

As with the variation of pool the pocketless billiards table doesn't invite the same qualines of skill and interest.

But billiards or pool it's all part of the cue and ball game which, research tells me, may have had its birth in Greece somewhere around the time the gods inhabited Mount Olympus.

Hence the unsocial reputation of a pool hall, or billiards parior.

It was often unfounded this assumption of dark, dingy activity on the part of the hoi polloi, as I hope you will agree when I mention there was a period in my life when the green baize of the billiards table fascinated me.

A 16-year-old girl was forced into a cer in front of the YMCA Wednesday night by two youths who took her for a two-hour ride before releasing her unharmed.

Police said the girl was walking on Blanshard Street about 10:15 p.m. when the youths abducted her in a lightcolored, older-model car, drove her to Sidey and North Saanich and finally dropped her off at Royal Oak,

The girl told police she did not know the two young men and they did not molest or

Boy Runs In Path Of Car

A 12-year-old hoy was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital and treated for minor injuries after running into the path of a car at Kenmore and Tyndall early Wednesday.

Arthur Golding, 3075 South-downe, was treated and released. He was taken to hospital by his mother.

Police said the youngster apparently waited from behind his mother's car into the path of an approaching oar driven by John Speer, 2065 Terrace. Mr. Speer reported the aceident to the police.

Atlantic Air Fares May Be Cut

VANCOUVER --- Reductions in North Atlantic air fares, effective next April 1, appear cione to becoming a reality. Canadian Pacific Airlines said yesterday, Bryan Renwick, CPA sales

NAZARETH The main stre: in Nazareth, where Christ lived, will be senamed Pope Paul VI street, in honor of the Pontiff who is expected here next month on his pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

Already this tiny town is bustling to make ready for the visit, and Nazareth's Christian deputy mayor, Nadim Bathish, said "We will do our utmost to make our city presentable for His Holiness.

We shall ask the people to bring out their carpets and cover the streets he will pass through."

(Meanwhile, in London, Church of England minister Rev. Arthur E. Payton described as "deplorable" a Lebanese report that a thriving black market in hotel bedrooms, with prices up to $500 a night, has sprung up in Jerusalem in anticipation of the Pope's pilgrimage.)

Biologists on board the federal fisheries department taging vessel the Naughty Lady last week estimated there were 100,000 grilse in Saanich Inlet last week.

They tagged 1,000 fish in the Inlet during their week of operations, and then carried on to continue the tagging program in Cowichan Bay and off Qualicum.

Watch out for icing conditions if you plan to fish the Inlet this weekend. If it is cold, better not get up too early. Wait until the skim of early morning ice has disappeared. That skim can badly damage a boat.

There are still plenty of winter springs from Sooke to Oak Bay and on around to Sidney waters but it has been pretty cold fishing for open sports boats.

Springs are being taken pretty well all over Saanich Inlet and Finlayson Arm. Cowichan Bay has been good for big grilse.

A late run of big coho is reported from the Qualicum area and they are being taken close to the river mouths.

Lake fishing has dropped off sharply, but river fishing is coming into its peak. This cold weather is dropping the swollen rivers rapidly. If it keeps up they will be too low to fish. Hit the rivers this weekend for good steelheading prospects.

Harris Creek was red hot at the weekend. Upper Cowichan River has been giving good trout fishing and some steelies are reported from lower reaches. Koksilah River is giving up ateclies but some are the dark summer runs. Nanaimo, Englishman, Little Qualicum, Ash, Stamp, China, Little Qualicum are all producing some steelies. Fishing closure on lower portion of the Sooke River will be lifted at midnight today.

Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association Holiday Contest ends Dec. 21. Top prize in the draw . . . each membership and each salmon more than three pounds gave another ticket on the draw . . . will be a choice of a carrop hoat and motor, $300 cash, or a trip to Hawaii. Winner will be announced at the January-general meeting.

Pollution, resulting from the mine cave-in at Jordan River, may have almost wiped out this year's coho production in the river. Fisheries department officials expect the loss to be high, but fortunately the Jordan River is not an important coho river. Probably less than 100 coho spawned there this year. Next year would have been a different story. Unlike most other west coast rivers, Jordan River has a run of pink salmon in the even-numbered years and the spawning of some 1,500 or more pinks could have been threatened.

The Jordan River disaster in its small way points up the need for concern by conservationists over mining in areas It also points up the dangers of conflicts of interest that

Company Will Improve Ventilation at Mill

Management of Victoria Plywood Limited has agreed to improve ventilation at the firm's Plumper Bay mill following a wildcat walkout by about 50 employees Wednesday night.

The walkout was to protest smoke in the plant. Victoria Plywood president Newton Cameron said last night that the dispute was "all settled."

Scelba charged that Moro has not given enough guarantees to his Roman Catholic Party that the Markist faction of the Socialist are not leading the Christian Democrats down the path to Communism.

WALKED OUT

Almost simultaneously, a powerful pro-communist faction of Pietro Nenni's Socialist party walked out of a party directorate meeting called to prevent an irrevocable split in the party over the Moro government.

The government had counted on a nominal majority of 386 votes in the 630-man chamber deputies to win the vote of confidence. Scelba was taking out a little more than 30 votes nd the pro-Communist socialists another 30-plus. This would reduce the Moro supporters to about 320 votes. The necessary majority is 316.

Same thing with us. In distilling Scerling Gin. we'd feel lost without our old English copper The one in the picture is at least 100 years old.

It came to Canada in the 1920's-when we imported Burnett's entire distillery to make gin from Sir Robert Burnett's famous old English Most modern stills are much larger—as much as 10 times larger. And we know that switching to such mass-producing monsters would save us money, time and trouble. But our gin wouldn't taste the same.

The way things are, we make it slowly-just a little at a time. Hovering over it. Sniffing. Tasting. Making sure every "run" is as smooth and dry as the last. If we ever retire these miniature stills, it will only be because we can no longer afford to make our Sterling Gin in small, unhurried batches.

Meanwhile, try it—won't you?

BONN (LAT) — The first stanslaughter tries manslaughter trial of woman doctor accused of giving a deformed child a death-bringing mercy injection will take place in Frankfurt

The child's mother claims to have taken a thalidomide drug during pregnancy.

SUSPENDED

On trial will be 44-year-old or. Mechthild Petersen, who has been suspended from prac-tice by the German Medical Association.

The accus lawyer also represents the West German drug house which developed the German drug, contergan.

Appearing in court as a foint plaintiff against the docfor is the dead child's father. Herr Siderow. The mother is Herr Siderow. The mother is in prison awaiting trial on a charge of having incited the doctor to give the injection.

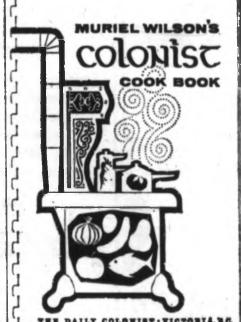

DEAD INFANT

The mother has one other child which is normal. The dead infant, aged 2½, was one of 25 similarly deformed child dren living in the same area of Frankfurt.

In releasing Dr. Petersen rom custody pending the trial, the investigating judge said there was no evidence of premeditated killing or that financial gain had been the

Gallery Show Fell Flat—Why? Asks Director

By TED GASKELL

Art Gallery director Colin Graham suggested last night that the reason a recent flop is that Canadians aren't interested in Canada.

Everyman's Canada, a

Municipal Hall In Exhibition

has been added to the "What Is Happening to Your City exhibition at the Art Gallery.

Last week Saanich voters passed a referendum for the construction of the $785,000 hall.

The art gallery exhibition includes a model of the proposed Centennial Square in Victoria as well as architectural sketches and water color paintings.

These show the eight-year-old plans for improvements to the Inner Harbor, which are displayed publicly for the first time, and paintings of the University of Victoria future

Also on display at the gallery are the works of Eric William Drury and woodcuts by Walter Phillips.

Attendance at the gallery was only 730 in November compared to the monthly average of 2,000.

The paintings were on display from Nov. 12 to Dec. 8. apart?" he asked. Another question he felt was posed by the lack of attendance is "are we interested in Canada or not?" * * *

"No one seems to be interested in early Canada. We thought the show would be popular but it was a dud," said the director. He said there was some interest shown by the few who did come but the trouble was not many came. Victorians aren't breaking any attendance records at the current "What Is Happening to Your City?" show either.

Attendance has been slow so far for the display of paintings and models of two planning projects. * * *

The number of visitors is expected to drop sharply about Dec. 15 when people are generally more interested in Christmas shopping then spending their time at the Art Gallery.

More Men Needed In Traffic

More personnel, manpower and time would be required to implement accident investigations as suggested by Motor Vehicle Superintendent George Lindsay, Victoria Police Chief John Gregory said yesterday.

He cited the 4 to 6 p.m. rush hour as an example. "At that time of day with the heavy traffic the police duty to the public is to safeguard them from further acciients and look after the injured," said Chief Gregory.

NOT THOROUGH Chief Gregory was commentng on Mr. Lindsay's statement that accident investigations are not being thoroughly carried out by trained personnel. Bocause of this many traffic offenders are not being charged and accident statistics are rendered valueless, Mr. Lindsay

IN FULL ACCORD

"I am in full accord with Mr. Lindsay with reservations. It takes an expert to determine mechanical failure and the direct cause of an accident. We just don't have the personnel, manpower and, quite frequently, the time.

25th Anniversary

Fourteen guests assembled for dinner at the Princess Mary when Mr. and Mrs. Michael Murray entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Buxton's 25th wedding anniversary. The table was centred with the anniversary cake flanked by tall tapers, and floral arrangements of late fall flowers. The toast to the couple was proposed by Don Goodman of Salt Spring Island. Highlight of the celebrations was a phone call from the Buxton's son William D. of Daytona Beach, Florida. Others attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Bob Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. John Cove, Mr. and Mrs. Al Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Don Goodman of Salt Spring, Mrs. Shirley Young, and Miss Muriel Lloyd.

Two prerequisites in a good room arrangement are comfort and unity. Like any good design, your room needs a focal point, a starting place. A fireplace is often the natural centre in a room. Here, a comfortable conversation group is arranged to highlight the fireplace. The two chairs in the foreground are set at right angles to the wall to help channel traffic to other rooms. Finished backs on new wood and upholstered furniture are as good-looking as the fronts-make it easy to use furniture pieces as room dividers.

Why All Secrecy? Civic Police Ask

LOS ANGELES (UPI)-Following are some unanswered questions in the FBI investigation of the Sinaira kidnap that are puzzling Los Angeles authorities:

Why was the only eyewitness, besides Frank Sinntra Jr., to the kidnapping-trumpet player John Fons-released from protective custody if the abductors were still loose? • Why is the FBI handling the investigation with such occreey that local law agencies are using newspapers as a basic source of information? • Why doesn't the FBI clarify the connection, if any, of the six men arrested as hank robbery suspects imme-diately after the kidnepping to the filantra case?

Why were two of the bank robbery suspects slapped in flacramento county jail for $100,000 ball each when normal procedure calls for them to be shipped back to the prison from which they escaped pending trial?

• Why did the FBI fail to relay descriptions of the ppers on radio and teletype channels to other enforce-

Why didn't the FBI, if it sought to maintain exclusive control in the case, warn local agencies to retrain from the investigation to avert a possible tipoff to the kidnappers?

Garden Notes

Buy Yourself a Book

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Looking back over my notes, I seem to have spent quite a bit of time and column space talking about garden books lately, and I think perhaps this is a good thing. Not only does a garden book make a most welcome Christmas present for some hoe-happy friend or relative, but with est, darkest, wettest portion of the year coming up, it isn't a bad idea to treat yourself to a book slanted to your particular interest.

Those of my readers who keep crapbooks of these columns will have the names and descriptions of the books I have reviewed in the past. Today I thought I would like to describe some of the more recent additions to my garden library.

One book which has given me much pleasure is The Joy of a Small Garden by Janet Gillespie and published by Dodd, Mead & Co. Mrs. Gillespie is the wife of a New Eng-land school teacher, and her book is the story of two rank beginners and the garden they made the hard way, with little skill and almost no money. The style is witty and informal, full of family anecdotes and amusing stories of the Gillespies' progress to become knowledgeable first home of their own, go through the usual cycles of biting off more than they can chew and starting projects on their half-acre plot they can't finish. Eventually, what with having babies and with Janet's bursitis and Bob's sacroiliac trouble, they are forced to devise labor-saving designs and methods in their garden. Some of these are most ingenious and highly practicable.

Another welcome addition to my bookcase this year has been Plant Doctoring is Fun by Cynthia West-cott, published by Van Nostrand. I several of Dr. Westcott's textbooks on plant diseases and pests, but I don't think I ever thought of her as a person until I read this most amusing autobiography.

It is hard to believe this woman scientist, who discovered the cause and cure of axalea blight in the deep south and licked brand canker in roses, had to take three cracks at the oral examination for her Ph.D. degree from Cornell University before she passed. Eventually, after some years in research for university and government experimental stations, she set up in private practice as a plant doctor, making in her first year of practice a total profit of $34.75.

Cynthia Westcott has the unique ability of making the rather dull subject of plant pathology come alive before your eyes. She seems to have had far more practical experience with blights and pests than most writers, but I think the chief reason why her book is so readable is because every line reflects the fact she loves her job and wouldn't be happy working in any other line.

The Wonderful World of Bulbs by Bebe Miles was given a rather lukewarm welcome when it arrived in the mail one morning. I couldn't remember why I had ordered it when I already owned two adequate texts on bulbs, and the enclosed bill was shattering, to say the least—the thing cost me $9, which was about twice as much as I was accustomed to paying for garden books.

Once I dipped into the book, I was lost, and I actually took it to bed with me for three nights munning. Mrs. Myles really knows her stuff, not only about the bulbs themselves and their history and culture, but their varied uses in the garden and what plants make good companions for them. Her methods of pest con-trol are unconventional, to say the least—her recommendation for squir-rels is a pocketful of rocks and a good throwing arm! I find myself turning more and more to her book for guidance when my mail brings knotty bulb problems to my desk.

JOHN CROSBY Explains Things to Alfie

Broke, But Gloriously Free

LONDON-I was reading a letter from home to my Cockney friend, Alfie, who is perennially fascinated by the golden American way of life in the golden United States, "It's going to be a slim Christmas," the lady wrote. "I'm still paying off for my broken leg."
"Payin' off," said Alfie, "y'mean the guv'mint don't pay fer 'er broken leg?" "We're a free country," I told him proudly, "We pay for our own broken legs."

* * "Coo," said Alfie. "We're 'obbled with socialism over 'ere. The guv'mint robs us of the pleasure of payin' our medical bills. It must be wonderful to be free of all that guv'mint interference. How long will it tyke the poor woman to pay fer 'er broken leg?" 'About 18 months, I think," I said. "Of course, she's broke-but free. That's the spirit of 1776. "Certainly hain't the spirit of 1963," said Alfie cheerfully. "I hunnerstan' you Americans 'ave one of the 'ighest tax rates in the 'ole world. Wot do yer get fer yer 'igh taxes?" "Oh," I told him, "we get many of the good things of life. The moon probe."

"We're preparing to land a man on the moon in 1970some such thing. It'll cost between 40 or 50 billion dollars. I don't think anyone really knows."

* * * "Blimey," said Alfie. "If 'e breaks 'is leg landin' on the moon, will 'e 'ave to pay for it?" "No," I explained. "The government will pay for his broken leg because he's on government service. It's only the taxpayers who pay for their own broken legs."

Alfie looked quizzical. "Wot uvver good things of life d'yer git fer them 'igh taxes?"

"Well-" I thought a bit. "The American taxpayers gets a lot of things. The Venus probe, for example, we found out that the other side of Venus is just as hot as this side." "That must be a big comfort to the lady wif the broken leg," said Alfie. I tried to explain the glow of pride the American taxpayer got out of pure scientific achievement. We all might have lived and died without knowing how hot the other side of Venus was. But he's a poor ignorant Cockney and he actually doesn't care how hot the other side of Venus is. I explained that even if the government had saved all those billions from the Venus probe, it still wouldn't use it to pay for taxpayers' broken legs because that wasn't the free American way.

"Ol don't think Oi could afford ter live in so free a country," said Alfie. "Ol'd much rather 'ave the guv'mint enslave me an' pay me bills."
"But that's socialism," I cried.

"I 'ate myself," said Alfie cheerfully. "But I'm a lazy Socialist spiv. Yer knows the giv'mint pays the medical bills of all the citizens in France, West Germany, Sweden, all of Scandinavia, Belgium, 'olland, Italy, Russia—" he

"It's a well-known fact that the guy mint pays the citizen's medical bills in almost every civilized country in the world except the gloriously free United States of America." "But we're free!" I cried. "Free! Free!

"Free to pay the bills." said Alfie cheerfully. "Tell me. guv'nor, are there any other countries as gloriously free to pay their medical expenses as America?"

"Well, of course, there's Afghanistan, there's the Congo and Outer Mongolia. They're free too." Alfie sniffed. "We calls 'em backward."

A few days before his death from cancer Huxley had an hour-long conversation on the phone with his close friend Franklin Lacy, who has written a musical version of Brave New World. The topic of their talk was the inevitability of pain and death. It was recorded by Mrs. Huxley. I would like to hear it.

In Seven Days in May, Kirk Douglas, playing a colonel, had to be seen leaving the Pentagon. There was no co-operation from the government. Strategy was required. A camera was hidden across the street. Kirk in his uniform, stepped smartly into the Pentagon, was saluted briskly; a minute later he came out, was saluted again. And the cameras turned. The biddings of one spade normally shows 12-16 high-card points, and the two-level response is made with a slightly weaker hand than in standard practice. The jump-shift is used on most hands which guarantee a game; it does not imply a strong interest in slam.

The East-West hands have been altered slightly to present a small problem in play. It is easy to see, with flour hands open, that the right play is to finesse the diamond nine. This allows declarer to make 10 tricks, but it may not be so easy with the hand hidden. Some players would go down by playing ace and another diamond, hoping for an honor to drop or for an even split. But the percentage play is to take two finesses, permitting South to keep better control of the hand.

The increases are in proportion to the boost given to teachers' and principals' salaries which over the district averaged more than two per cent.

To put the officials' salaries above the school principals' could mean $2,100 for one man and $1,500 for the other.

The request was made to the board's finance committee, which recommended that school superintendent John Gough and the education committee study the request and report later.

Other board officials are expected to make individual requests for increases.

Don't Split North

OTTAWA (CP) - Another pien came from the Northwest Territories Wednesday, asking the federal government to forget about splitting the region into two districts.

Brian Pearson, one of three private businessmen in Frobisher Bay, appeared before the Commons committee on mines, forests and waters as a representative of the Chamber of Commerce of that town and said the bills that would divide the territories are undemocratic, unjustified and

COMPLETE UNIT

"The whole thing is not in the best interests of the people of the territories." he said. "We don't feel it would be an advantage at all. We are a complete unit up there."

"If left together, we could become a great, solid chunk of Canada ... The North Territories in future could become the backbone of Canada with its resources."

Under the legislation, drawn up under the Conservative administration and presented to Parliament by the Liberal government, the territories would he split in a north-south line not far west of the Saskatche wan - Manitoba border. The west would be known as Mac kenzie district and the east as Nunassiaq. Mackenzie would have a resident commisand Nunassiaq would be administered from Ottawa.

PEOPLE LACK VOTE

Mr. Pearson, who operates an oil distributing business said people in the eastern Arctic were particularly annoyed that they didn't have a repre sentative on the old Northwest Territories council to carry their views when the matter was under discussion. And under the proposed legislation he said, there would be many people still without a vote in the district. "To deprive people of their

Crosswalks In Ottawa

Bilingual
OTTAWA (CP) - A group miling itself the Anti-Char Association Wednesday night posted French-language migns on Ottawa's 16 cross

The action was a protest this week by Mayor Charlotte Whitton. She told a city council meeting that Ottawa could not have signs in both the English and French languages until Ontario declared itself a bilingual province.

A spokesman for the group telephoned Le Droit, Ottawa's French language daily news-paper, to say that the cardsigns containing the words "traverse de pietons" had been hung directly under the English-language signs.

OTTAWA (UPI) - External eid director H. O. Moran Thursday rejected a suggestion that Canada concentrate more on solving its own problems and less on providing asmintance to needy nations

"If you can look at the indescribable poverty in some of these countries and say no, you have stronger guts than I," he told Commons external of fairs committee member Lawrence Kindt.

DRAW LINE

Kindt (PC MacLeod) had questioned where Canada should "draw the line" in foreign aid spending. He noted that the government now put up more than $50,000,000 a year in direct financial aid when this country was "still in our infancy" and facing major problems of its own.

"I myself have never believed that there are rich nations and poor nations, but rather that every nation has its own poor areas and its own development problems," Moran replied. "But both as a nation and as individuals we try and help the under-privileged within our own country and I don't see why our humanitarian instincts have to end at our own border. COMMONS ISSUE

The exchange closed with both men agreeing that the level of Canada's foreign aid - recently boosted by 50 per cent to some $180,000,000 a year-was an issue to be de cided by the government and

Parliament. Moran, in his first appearance before the committee, admitted the quantity of Cana dian essistance "may be low and subject to criticism." But he stressed that its quality was among the highest in the

The Gifts of Christmas

to the The Gift Virgin Mary

By JOHN J. STEWART

It was a quiet summer reth, in the hill country of Galilce.

Mary, a teen-age girl of exquisite beauty and deep spirituality, had retired to her room. Her mind was filled with pleasant thoughts of her recent betrothal and coming marriage to her cousin, Joseph the carpenter, who as her self was of the royal line of David. Joseph she mused might even he a king and she a queen, had not the political rights of the royal family long nce been lost. But now the Jews were under the domi nation of Rome, and the cruel and crafty Arab, Herod the Great, so called, was puppet king.

Mary had heard her father and others of the elders speak often, sometimes bitterly, of Israel's unfortunate political condition. And she had oft heard a recital of the carefully kept family genealogy through which they traced their ancestry directly to David.

But this was of much has concern to Mary than the fact that she was to be wed to a good man, a man of virtue. In nobility of character, Mary was indeed a princess in the

As she sat in meditation, Mary was startled by the sudden appearance of an angel in the midst of a brilliance of light that filled her room.

"Hail, thou who art highly favored," said the angel, "The Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women." The astonished young woman trembled with fright. 'Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favor with God.

And behold, thou shalt conceive and bring forth a Son, and shall call His name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest . , . " "How shall this be," asked Mary, "seeing I know not

Massey Wouldn't Sign Kill-Coffin Order

Massey: Held Out

OTTAWA (CP) - A reliable source says there were indications at the time that in 1956 Governor-General Vincent Mas sey held out for one or two days against signing Wilbert Coffin a execution order.

The source, formerly con-nected with the federal justice department, says former Lib eral prime minister St. Laurent had to use all his powers to eloquence and experience at law to persuade Mr. Massey to sign

Mr. Massey's reported doubts about affixing his signature could have raised a grave constitutional crisis. A governorgeneral must accept the recommendation of the government in such cases and though his signature is only a formality it is nonetheless a constitutional necessity.

It was known at the time that the St. Laurent cabinet had made a decision on Coffin's application for mercy but that the announcement had to be withheld for some time pending the Governor-General's signature.

The announcement that the cabinet had refused to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment was made Feb. 9, 1956, and Cottin was hanged real's Bordeaux Jail.

Coffin was convicted of murdering an American hunter in the Gaspe Peninsula. Coffin's execution was postponed seven times after his conviction in July, 1954. Coffin escaped Sept. 8, 1955, from a Quebec City jail and gave himself up a few hours later.

> The cabinet made an unprecedented reference of the case to the Supreme Court of Canada. In a 5-to-2 opinion, the court said it would have upheld the conviction if it had granted Coffin leave to appeal.

In the Commons Thursday, Justice Minister Chevrier, who was not a cabinet minister at the time of the 1956 cabinet decision, said any royal commission into the Coffin case should be provincial.

was replying to Reid Scott (NDP Toronto Danforth) who proposed a royal commission to clear away all the rumors and clouds which are surrounding the most mysterious murder trial in Canadian history." * * *

The Gifts of Christmas

to the The Gift Virgin Mary

By JOHN J. STEWART

Second of a Series It was a quiet summer evening in the village of Naza-

Mary, a teen-age girl of exquisite beauty and deep apirituality, had retired to her room. Her mind was filled with pleasant thoughts of her recent betrothal and coming marriage to her cousin. Joseph the carpenter, who as herself was of the royal line of David.

Joseph, she mused, might even be a king and she a queen, had not the political rights of the royal family long since been lost. But now the Jews were under the domination of Rome, and the cruel and crafty Arab, Herod the Great, so called, was puppet king. * *

Mary had heard her father and others of the elders speak often, sometimes bitterly, of Israel's unfortunate political condition. And she had oft heard a recital of the carefully kept family genealogy through which they traced their ancestry directly to David.

But this was of much less concern to Mary than the fact that she was to be wed to a good man, a man of virtue. In nobility of character, Mary was indeed a princess in the house of Israel.

As she sat in meditation, Mary was startled by the sudden appearance of an angel in the midst of a brilliance of light that filled her room.

"Hail, thou who art highly favored," said the angel. "The Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women." The astonished young woman trembled with fright. Fear not. Mary, for thou hast found favor with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive and bring forth a Son, and shall call His name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest . . . "

"How shall this be," asked Mary, "seeing I know not

Canadian Ambassador Charles Ritchie called on the U.S. government Thursday to block legislation which would force Canadian lumber and other products shipped to the U.S. to be labelled with the country of origin.

Ritchie presented a confidential note to Deputy State Undersecretary Alexis Johnson which, it is reported, exernment's serious concern over the congressional meas-

The note also is reported to have stated that if this bill is enacted, the Canadian administration would feel that such enactment would jeopardize the prospects for the so-called "Kennedy round" of world tariff negotiations scheduled to open next year.

Massey Wouldn't Sign Kill-Coffin Order OTTAWA (CP) - A reliable

source says there were indications at the time that in 1956 Governor-General Vincent Massey held out for one or two days against signing Wilbert Coffin's execution order.

* * * The source, formerly con-nected with the federal justice department, says former Libhad to use all his powers of cloquence and experience at law to persuade Mr. Massey to sign

Mr. Massey's reported doubts about affixing his signature could have raised a grave constitutional crisis. A governorgeneral must accept the recommendation of the government in such cases and though his signature is only a formality it is n-metheless a constitutional ne cessity.

It was known at the time that the St. Laurent cabinet had made a decision on Cuffin's application for mercy but that the announcement had to be withGovernor-General's signature.

The announcement that the cabinet had refused to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment was made Feb. 9, 1956, and Coffin was hanged early the next morning in Montreal's Bordeaux Jail.

Coffin was convicted of murdering an American hunter in Coffin's execution was postponed seven times after his conviction in July, 1954. Coffin escaped Sept. 8, 1955, from a Quebec City jail and gave himself up a few hours later,

* * / The cabinet prade an un-precedented reference of the case to the Supreme Court of Canada. In a 5-to-2 opinion, the court said it would have upheld the conviction if it had granted Coffin leave to appeal.

In the Commons Thursday Justice Minister Chevrier, who was not a cabinet minister at the time of the 1956 cabinef decision, said any royal commission into the Coffin case should be provincial. He was replying to Reid Scott (NDP-Toronto Danforth) who proposed a royal commission to 'clear away all the rumors and clouds which are surrounding the most mysterious murder trial in Canadian history."
